

My MultiPay Critical Illness Plan IV

Because you don't give up, neither will we

You would strive on even with a critical illness diagnosis. So should your critical illness coverage.

Some critical illness plans stop providing cover after giving a payout for a covered critical illness. Getting new cover can then be challenging.

Yet critical illness protection remains crucial whether you've never had a critical illness before or you've been diagnosed with one in your lifetime. This is because it's still possible to develop a new or recurrent critical illness.

Stage 3B breast cancer patients face a 70 to 90 per cent chance of recurrence in 10 years¹

4 in 10 stroke patients will suffer another stroke within the next 10 years²

8 out of 10 colorectal cancer patients who suffer a recurrence develop cancer which involves the liver³

The fight with a critical illness can be long and financially draining.

You may have to pay for expensive tests, surgery, drugs and therapy.

Cancer treatment costs can vary greatly.

| Medical claims submitted by an Aviva MyShield policyholder ⁴ for | Average medical claim* | Highest medical claim* |
|---|------------------------|------------------------|
| Breast Cancer | S$ 21,687 | S$ 794,204 |
| Colon Cancer | S$ 30,878 | S$ 701,488 |
| Lung Cancer | S$ 55,487 | S$ 381,976 |

* Claim amount includes hospitalisation, surgery, outpatient chemotherapy/radiotherapy, pre-hospitalisation and post-hospitalisation claims.

As you may have to take long periods off work, you'll also need an income source for monthly expenses.

How would you cope with the cost of a critical illness?

The right protection plan gives you vital cushioning against the financial impact of critical illnesses.

Your critical illness insurance should

- provide a lump-sum payout to help with healthcare costs, monthly bills or income replacement while you recuperate
- allow you to make multiple claims, including for recurrence of critical illnesses
- give additional assurance on other conditions, such as benign or borderline malignant tumours or hospital stays in the Intensive Care Unit.

It's time for a plan that gives you financial confidence to always put your health first.
