Product-Specific Risks

You are exposed to derivative risks.

Derivative use exposes the Underlying Fund to risks different from and potentially greater than, the risks associated with investing directly in securities and may therefore result in additional loss, which could be significantly greater than the cost of the derivative.

You are exposed to property securities related risks

There are special risks associated with investment in securities of companies engaged in property markets. These include the cyclical nature of property values, increases in property taxes, changes in zoning laws, regulatory limits on rents, environmental risks, depreciation in the value of buildings over time, and increases in interest rates.

You are exposed to over-the-counter (OTC) market risks.

Investment in OTC markets are speculative and are relatively illiquid, hence are subject to high volatility. OTC investment's valuation may be difficult to obtain as reliable information of the issuers and the risks associated to the issuers' business is not publicly available. OTC derivatives have the risk of incorrectly valuing or pricing and they may not fully correlate with the underlying assets. Investment in OTC markets carries the risk that a counterparty may default on its obligations. In the event of a bankruptcy or insolvency of a counterparty, the Underlying Fund could experience delays in liquidating the position and significant losses.

You are exposed to hedging risks.

Any attempts to reduce certain risks may not work as intended. Any measures that the Underlying Fund takes that are designed to offset specific risks may work imperfectly, may not be feasible at times, or may fail completely.

You are exposed to concentration risks.

Investing in a limited number of issuers, industries, type of securities or within a limited geographical can be more risky than investing more broadly. The Underlying Fund's value may fall where the area of concentration is heavily affected by an adverse event.

You are exposed to securities lending risks.

The Underlying Fund may lend its portfolio securities to financial institutions and expose to the risk that the borrower defaults and fails to return the borrowed securities. The loaned securities may be secured by cash collateral that may be reinvested and may incur losses or underperforms relative to other investment options. Parties in a securities lending transaction may fail to comply, either inadvertently or purposely, with either contractual covenants or laws and regulations governing securities lending activities. There are also operational issues including market or exchange problems, miscommunication between lenders and borrowers regarding the terms of transactions between them, failed reconciliations, missed record dates, incorrect tax entitlements, etc.
